

Q You have any idea what it would cost to repair the sash, and steps and porch?

A I would say in the neighborhood of $50 anyhow.

MRS. ALTHA BISHOP, the Complainant, deposes and says further:
By Mr. Storm:

Q What is the condition of the house with reference to its being in need of repairs?

A Well, of course, I think I know that, as I said before, better than anyone else does. As I said, the widow sash, most of them are bad, getting bad; in a year it is going to need practically all new window sash, upper and lower sash too. The front porch, almost the half of that will have to be taken out and new flooring put in. The back steps are bad. We put several new steps in - my husband and I did it ourselves last fall, and the carriages are bad too. We noticed when we did that; it is practically rotted in two. In fact it needs a whole new pair of steps right now, and it is in need of paint also. The house hasn't been thoroughly painted every place for a couple years and the whole house should be painted.

Q What does it cost to put in new sash?

A For a small sash, just the half sash that is, not for the entire window, cost me $1.50. We have two great big windows in front. I don't know what we would have to pay for new sash for those. It would be double that I know for those sashes.

Q What is the condition of the roof?

A The roof is good as far as I know, because that roof was guaranteed for 20 years when it was put on the house.

Q Furnace in good condition?

A The furnace as far as I know is in good condition. We put up a new pipe just last fall before we started to use the furnace -
